2021 Transformation Series: Transformation Tuesdays

Today is the second roundtable discussion in our series, and features family members of people with developmental disabilities sharing their ideas and insights as we all move through the systems change process and help improve person-centered planning, community membership, and employment opportunities for individuals across Ohio.

Why we're here and how the 2 hours will go...

Purpose: to share how Ohio families are thinking about and supporting the move to more community-minded supports.

First off, just what is “provider transformation”?

Why we're here and how the 2 hours will go ...

Provider, or Systems, Transformation:

An intentional process that allows county boards, providers, partners, people being supported, allies, and families to reinvent the way we support people with developmental disabilities to become vital members of their communities.

Moving from a facility-based model to a more community-conscious one takes time, dedication, energy and focus.

And an ongoing plan.

Why we're here and how the 2 hours will go...

Transformation and innovation are not always about making big moves, but the daily actions providers and others take toward supporting people where they are to where they want to go.

During the 2020/21 Pandemic, of course, everyone involved in the service system had to reinvent supports and the way they are provided, to maintain health and safety, as well as to support meaningful routines.

This lived experience helps all of us appreciate the necessity of transformation and how it starts and succeeds with attention to how programs are organized and perceived by the DSPs and managers running them, as well as the individuals and families who depend on them.
